

er Speaking at Castelgandolfo, his as summer home, Pius XII asserted an that the world today has men who on ignore not only the Church, but the ed "very rudiments of religion itself;" in. men who see no evil in evil deeds rd and lust and would spurn "the ve primary norms of morals and jusas tice;" "there are cynics who would 16. deride holy things and weak men at who would permit these offenses m- to pass. . . ."

Despite this turmoil, His Holiness said, "there are great rays of hope and fields white with harvest for those who labor to bring Christ to the world." He stressed the oath of the Jesuits, which enables them to bring "a spirit prepared and prompt to obey in all things the true Spouse of Christ
. . . our holy Mother Church."

In another audience, held for the Most Rev. Emmanuel Suarez, O.P., and the Dominicans who elected
